ASU-Beebe Alum Pendergrass Begins Teaching Career

Arkansas State University-Beebe proudly announces the recent achievements of alumna Bailey Pendergrass, a dedicated educator who has rapidly made strides in education since graduating in 2021 with an associate degree in elementary education.

Hailing from Jacksonville, Pendergrass wasted no time embarking on her teaching journey. Last fall, she assumed a teaching role at Wooster Elementary School in the Greenbrier School District, where she began instructing fifth grade mathematics.

Post-graduation from ASU-Beebe, Pendergrass found a supportive environment within the elementary education program at the Arkansas State University transfer center located at the ASU-Beebe campus. Reflecting on this opportunity, Pendergrass said, "This allowed me to stay close to home while pursuing my dream to be a teacher."

To obtain a teaching license in Arkansas, Pendergrass successfully navigated the challenge of Praxis exams in science, social studies, math, and reading, along with the foundations of reading test. She acknowledges the crucial support from ASU-Beebe and Arkansas State University, providing valuable resources to prepare for and pass these exams.

Building on her academic achievements, Pendergrass earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education and graduated as a distinguished National Society of Leadership and Success member.

During her impactful tenure at ASU-Beebe, Pendergrass emerged as a student leadership scholar, the Student Government Association president, and a recipient of the esteemed Student Leadership Scholarship.

Before enrolling at ASU-Beebe, Pendergrass was home-schooled and graduated through the Education Alliance based out of Little Rock. Her decision to attend ASU-Beebe was rooted in her pursuit of an affordable education close to home.

"At ASU-Beebe, I was able to accomplish both goals," said Pendergrass.

Her connection to the campus became evident during a senior year tour when she stood before the arch, recognizing the rich history and vibrant community ASU-Beebe held.

"After touring campus and meeting many of the staff and faculty, I was welcomed into the community with open arms. I vividly remember after taking a tour of campus during my senior year, I stood back and looked at the arch and admired the history it and this campus holds. As cheesy as it was, that was the moment I knew I wanted to go to ASU-Beebe," Pendergrass said.

Pendergrass credits her supportive family, including parents Michael and Emily, and her younger brother, Isaac, for playing a pivotal role in achieving her academic goals. Isaac, also an ASU-Beebe graduate, earned his associate degree in business science and continued his education at Arkansas State University.

Pendergrass highlighted their instrumental role in her growth as a teacher by expressing gratitude toward the Greenbrier School District.

"I cannot thank them enough for their support and guidance," said Pendergrass.

Since relocating to Greenbrier, Pendergrass has actively engaged with the community, participating in programs like VIP student initiatives and the Little Dribblers basketball program.

"I have been able to work with students in the school through the VIP student program where low-income students are supported in an after-school program," Pendergrass said.

When asked about her preparation for the teaching profession, Pendergrass acknowledged the challenges but emphasized that ASU-Beebe played a significant role.

"They say nothing prepares you for teaching. This is true. As I have recently learned, there are just some things you have to learn while on the job. However, ASU-Beebe prepared me for many aspects of teaching," said Pendergrass.

Pendergrass's impactful time at ASU-Beebe was enriched by her involvement in student government and leadership programs, fostering meaningful relationships with fellow students and staff. She fondly reminisced about her favorite campus spots and activities, such as exploring the campus walking trail, playing checkers, cornhole, and enjoying the butterfly garden.

Pendergrass acknowledged the crucial support of her faith and family.

"I could not have made it through my college experience without God and my family," said Pendergrass.

Her advice for future students is to embrace vulnerability and seek support.

"Be a listening ear and celebrate your wins! Allow others to help you and ask for help," said Pendergrass.

ASU-Beebe Alumni Stories is a project of the alumni association with the goal of sharing and preserving the ASU-Beebe historical and educational experiences of former students. For more information about programs offered at ASU-Beebe, call (501) 882-3600 or view the website at www.asub.edu.
